Accelerating change in local government underlines the need for high quality records management: documenting the changes demonstrates openness and transparency to the citizens of today and provides a rich source of data for researchers in the decades to come.

Records and archives give flesh and blood to the past deeds of society. They provide the evidence of how our communities evolved and developed, how and why decisions were made, and open a window to our understanding of the officials who made the decisions and the citizens upon whom the decisions impacted.

This report, the first of its kind for local government, provides a comprehensive guide for local authorities to assist them in the development of best practice in records management, in order to meet their business needs and legal obligations in relation to local archives.

The report is particularly timely as it follows closely the launch of ISO 15489, the international Standard on Records Management, launched on 3rd October, 2001 in Montreal, Canada.

I wish to thank the members of the National Records Retention Policy Committee for their work in compiling this magnum opus, which will make an enormous contribution to the work of local authorities by promoting uniformity in record-keeping practices and ensuring that, in the future, good records management practices are the norm.

De bharr na n-athraithe móra atá ag tarlú sa chóras rialtais áitiúil tá feidhm le bainistiú taifead d'ardchaighdeán. Is tríd na hathruithe seo a tháifeadh a chruthaíonn muid go bhfuil an córas oscailte agus freagrach do phobal an lae inniu agus go mbeidh sé mar fhoinsé mhaith eolais do thaighdeoirí san am atá le teacht fosta.

Cuireann taifid agus ábhar cartlainne tuilleadh eolais ar fáil faoi stair na tíre. Tugann siad léargas ar cá as a dtáinig an pobal anseo agus an fhorbairt atá déanta againn ó shin, cúis agus údar achán chinneadh a rinneadh, agus tugann sé tuiscint dúinn ar na hoifigigh a rinne na cinnithe seo agus ar na daoine a raibh tionchar ag na cinnithe orthu.

Is é atá sa thuairisc seo, an chéad cheann dá chineál do rialtas áitiúil, ná treoirlínte cuimsitheacha d'údarásí áitiúla le cuidiú leo an cleachtas is fearr a fhorbairt maidir le bainistiú taifead, sa dóigh is go riarfaí ar a riachtanaisí gnó agus dualgaisí dlí maidir le hábhar áitiúil cartlainne.

Tháinig an tuairisc seo in am tráthúil cionn is go dtagann sí go luath sna sála ar sheoladh ISO 15489, an Caighdeán Idirnáisiúnta do Bhainistiú Taifead, a seoladh ar an 3 Deireadh Fómhair, 2001 i Montreal, Ceanada.

Is mian liom buíochas a ghabháil le baill an Choiste Polasaí Náisiúnta um Choinneáil Taifead as an obair a rinne siad leis an saothar mór seo a ullmhú. Cuideoidh sé go mór le hobair na n-údarás áitiúil lena chinntiú go mbeidh dea-chleachtas bainistithe taifead mar ghnáthnós acu.

1.0 Introduction

1.1 Origins of the National Retention Policy Report for Local Authority Records

This Report has been produced by the Local Authorities National Retention Policy Committee. The genesis of the committee was the March 2000 meeting of the Freedom of Information Officers, when it was decided that a sub-committee should research the vital importance of records management in local authorities and prepare a template. Arising from contacts between local authority Archivists and Freedom of Information Officers at that time, it became clear that all local authorities had a common need for a records management strategy.

Local Authorities have broadly similar functions, and hold many record groups in common. A considered policy on the retention and controlled disposal of these records is at the core of sound records management. To optimise work on the template, it was decided to form a joint committee of local authority FOI Officers and Archivists. The committee reported to the County and City Managers' Association via the FOI National Steering Committee, under the aegis of the Local Government Management Services Board.

1.2 Terms of Reference

The Committee adopted the following Terms of Reference:-

1. Main objective is to develop a national records retention policy document, including guidelines for records management. This will be carried out by identifying the common classes of records held in the main sections of local authorities.
2. Recommendations for quality microfilming and document management systems to be included with the final document. Guidelines for electronic records to also be included.
3. Guidelines to be provided on identifying records of archival value.

1.3 Members of the Committee:

Aidan Maher, Chairman	Dublin City Council
Niamh Brennan	Donegal County Council
Grainne Doran	Midland Region - Laois, Offaly, Longford and Westmeath County Councils
Assumpta Doyle	Wexford County Council
Mary Fitzpatrick	Mid East Region - Kildare, Meath and Wicklow County Councils
Jacqui Hayes	Clare County Council
Valerie Lyons	Clare County Council
Tony Murphy	Galway County Council
Joanne Rothwell	Waterford County Council

1.4 Methodology

The Retention Policy Report was produced using information obtained from records surveys carried out in each of the participating local authorities. Each section was surveyed and the results were compared. This enabled the identification of common and uniquely held records series. The committee members and an official from the relevant section assessed the returned record surveys in the context of the legislative, administrative, and archival requirements for holding the records. The duration of the retention period for each series, throughout the various stages of the record's life cycle, was then determined.

The Report is organised in accordance with the functions of local authorities. As a result, some of the series in the Report are quite broad and may encompass more than one series existing in a section. The file series that appear in the Report are those that were existing in the sections during survey work. Therefore, the Report relates only to the current functions of the local authorities, or any obsolete functions where the records relating to such functions continued to be held in the local authorities at the time of the surveys.

Draft retention schedules were circulated to the Local Authority Archivists' Group and the Freedom of Information Officers Group for comment.

The Draft National Retention Policy Report was circulated for comment to the Department of Environment and Local Government; all local authorities; the County and City Managers' Association; the Local Government Management Services Board's National Steering Committee for Freedom of Information; the Office of the Information Commissioner; the National Archives; the Society of Archivists, Ireland; and the Library Association of Ireland.

The responses of these bodies were taken into consideration and changes were made to the report where necessary.

1.5 The Need for a National Retention Policy

Access to information is increasingly viewed as a basic right of citizenship. This is reflected in an increasing body of legislation providing for public access to information that is held by public bodies. This legislation includes:

- ◆ Data Protection Act, 1988
- ◆ Local Government Act, 1994
- ◆ Freedom of Information Act, 1997
- ◆ Prompt Payment of Accounts Act, 1997
- ◆ Access to Information on the Environmental Regulations (S.I. No. 125, 1998)
- ◆ E-Commerce Act, 1999
- ◆ Planning and Development Act, 2000
- ◆ Local Government Act, 2001

Records Management is a vital support function for all organisations but it is particularly vital in government organisations, where there is a responsibility to offer transparency and accountability to the public that they have been established to serve.

In The Freedom of Information Act – Compliance By Public Bodies Report issued by the Information Commissioner in July 2001, the Commissioner recommends that a proper Records Management system be in place to facilitate the operation of the Freedom of Information Act, 1997.

“Each public body should devise and publish a records management policy covering the creation, maintenance and destruction of records. The objectives of the policy should be to ensure that the activities and decisions of the public bodies are adequately recorded. Each public body should allocate responsibility at senior management level for ensuring that development and improvement of records management is accorded the appropriate priority.”¹

The absence of specific legislation on the retention of records necessitates the creation of this report.

In recent times, a number of reports have been made throughout the world in relation to records management and the difficulties that can arise from the lack of a professionally managed records management system.²

Records are required to document the work of an organisation and these records must also be maintained and accessible. Records are vital evidence of the actions and transactions of an organisation. With no record, there is no evidence that any work has been carried out.

¹ Subsequently the Information Commissioner made a submission on the 3rd July 2001 to the Joint Oireachtas Committee on the Strategic Management Initiative in which he reiterated the need for records management.

² See Appendix I

1.6 Advantages of a National Retention Policy

- ◆ Provides a considered basis for the decisions to retain and dispose of records / files which will be of benefit in any queries arising from Fol requests;
- ◆ Savings in storage space, staff resources and costs;
- ◆ Parity of record-keeping and disposal in local authorities, therefore, parity in the provision of access by the public to records;
- ◆ Parity of record-keeping and disposal in local authorities which will be of assistance in cases where records are required by the courts in litigation;
- ◆ Identifies and provides common decisions on what records are of archival value in local authorities. This ensures that these records are not mistakenly destroyed;
- ◆ Provides local authorities with a blueprint for their records management programme and their own more detailed retention scheduling;
- ◆ Provides for the controlled disposal of local authority records;
- ◆ Facilitates ready access to records in response to requests by the public.

1.7 Form of the Report

The National Retention Policy

- ◆ Is intended to cover all records that are common to all or most local authorities, created or maintained in any format, including electronic records;
- ◆ Is intended to be used as a blueprint for more specific retention schedules to be developed by individual local authorities;
- ◆ Specifies how long records should be retained;
- ◆ Specifies whether, upon expiry of the retention periods, the records should be destroyed or transferred to a local authority archive.

Authority for use of the Report

- ◆ All decisions concerning the disposal of records contained in this schedule are authorised by the Department of the Environment & Local Government, the County and City Managers Association, the Freedom of Information Officers Group and the Local Authority Archivists Group.
- ◆ Officers using the schedule should apply it with caution, bearing in mind that the authorisations for disposal are given in terms of administrative and archival requirements, and in accordance with such legislation governing the retention of records existing at the time of publication. It is the responsibility of the Certifying Officer / Records Manager / Archivist to ensure that any new legislation is complied with.

Format of Records

The National Retention Policy Report is applicable to any record which performs the function described in the series title, irrespective of format.³

1.8 Updating the Report

The National Retention Policy Report will be reviewed and updated periodically. It is advised that the Report should be revised at least every five years so that new legislation and new functions can be incorporated into the document.

³ Section 80, Local Government Act 2001, states that 'local records' 'includes books, maps, plans, drawings, papers, files, photographs, films, micro-films and other micrographic records, sound recordings, pictorial records, magnetic tapes, magnetic discs, optical or video discs, other machine-readable records, other documentary or processed material made or received, and held in the course of its business or as successor to any other body by a local authority and includes copies of any such records duly made...'

1.9 Assistance in Using the Report

Local Authorities requiring assistance in interpreting and implementing the Retention Policy Report, can contact their Local Authority Archivist, or if one is not employed, they can contact members of the committee.

1.10 Acknowledgments

The assistance of the management and staff in the local authorities was greatly appreciated and was vital to the creation of this report. The Committee would particularly like to express its appreciation to staff who, at its invitation, attended meetings to advise the Committee, and the assistance of the Local Authority Archivists' Group, the Freedom of Information Officers' Group, the Department of the Environment and Local Government and other local government bodies.

The Committee would particularly like to express its appreciation of the Local Government Management Services Board who provided the finance to produce this Report. The staff of the Local Government Management Services Board were also most helpful and accommodated the meetings of the Committee throughout the process of drawing up this Report.

The assistance, advice and guidance from archivists and records managers in countries such as England, Australia, Canada, United States and New Zealand, is also very much appreciated. In particular, the staff at the Public Records Office in New South Wales were very helpful. The Public Records Office, New South Wales and the Australian Standards Agency very kindly permitted the use of definitions of terms.

We are also grateful to the National Archives of Ireland for permission to use images from their publication "Lovers of Liberty".

2.0 Recommendations for a Records Management System

2.1 Key Recommendations

Key recommendations for best practice in Records Management are:

Records Management System
File Management
Records Centre
Archives Centre
Proper Disposal of Records

2.2 Records Management System

A records management system controls the creation, distribution, filing, retrieval, storage and disposal of records.^{4,5}

Records Management focuses on the natural life cycle of records in order to provide an organised system of control. Records have a three-stage life cycle:

- ◆ Current records are stored within the offices of the organisation and are frequently required by staff in order to carry out the functions of their section.
- ◆ Records become non-current when they are needed only for occasional reference, or in order to meet legal or financial obligations. At this stage, they can be stored off-site in a records centre.
- ◆ Finally, records are no longer required by the organisation and are in the archive / dispose phase, when they are either destroyed or transferred to an archive centre.

⁴ "Records Management is the discipline and organisational function of managing records to meet operational needs, accountability requirements and community expectations". Australian Records Management Standard

⁵ See ISO 15489, the International Standard on Records Management

This three-stage life cycle is controlled by a Records Schedule, which determines how long each stage of the life-cycle lasts and states whether the records are to be archived or disposed.

The National Retention Policy Report is a Records Schedule and is organised on a broad basis to determine the life cycles of records held in common by local authorities. It is recommended that each local authority develop a more detailed set of Records Schedules, formed on the basis of the more general guidelines provided by this Report.

A retention recommendation is implemented as follows:

- ◆ A file or set of files in the series remains current in the office for the period of currency, e.g. 5 years from the date of the earliest document in the file.
- ◆ When the earliest document is 5 years old, the file or set of files are closed and transferred to the Records Centre and held there for the duration of non-currency. The latest documents on the top of the file are moved to a new file as a continuation of the series, and the same period of currency is dated from the earliest of these documents.
- ◆ A list of files that have reached the end of the period of non-currency is sent to the originating section, to check that the section no longer requires the files.
- ◆ The Records Centre staff retain a record of the requests made for the file during non-currency. If a file is requested frequently by staff of the section up to the time it is due for disposal or transfer to the Archives, it will then be flagged for attention and the retention period reviewed by the staff of the Records Centre and the relevant Section.
- ◆ With the agreement of the head of the section, the file is then either transferred to the Archives or destroyed.
- ◆ All records destroyed are listed and certified by both a Certifying Officer and Archivist. A Certificate of Disposal is retained permanently as proof that the destruction was carried out in accordance with the records schedule and with the approval of the Certifying Officer and Archivist.⁶

The File Series Correspondence relates to correspondence sent and received by all sections in a local authority that do not relate to a particular project or any other series relating to the functions of the section. This is 'one-off' correspondence dealing with general queries or other minor matters that do not form part of the file series in the section.

Current: This correspondence is held on a correspondence file in the Section for one year from the date that the file is first opened. At the end of the year the latest documents in the file are moved to a new file and this file has the same code and retention period as the first file, as it continues the same series.

Non-Current: At the end of the year, the file is closed and sent to the Records Centre with all of the other files from the section to be transferred at this time. It is recorded in the Transfer List and placed in a box for transfer to the Records Centre.

Archive/Dispose: The file remains in the Records Centre for the two years of non-currency and at the end of these two years, the file is listed on a Disposal List at the Records Centre and this is sent for approval to the originating section. If the section gives approval for disposal, the file is shredded and recycled.

The File Series Progress Reports is a series of files containing reports, correspondence and memoranda from sections sent to Directors of Services, Managers, Management Teams and Strategic Policy Committees reporting on the current progress on projects or directives operating in their section.

Current: The file is held in the section for three years from the date the file is first opened. A new file is opened as a continuation of the series when the old file is closed with the latest documents from the old file moved to the new file.

Non-Current: At the end of the three years of currency, the file is listed in a Transfer List and placed in a box with all other files from the section due for transfer to the Records Centre.

Archive / Dispose: At the end of the four years of non-currency, the file is transferred to the local authority archives service for permanent retention as an archival record. At the Archives Service, the file will be scheduled for archival listing and any repair work required. Once listed, it will be made available to researchers at the archives service.

General comments on example: staff at the Records Centre will note the number of times the file is requested for return by the originating section. If the requests are considerable, the period of non-currency will be extended to meet the administrative requirements of staff at the local authority before the file is disposed. Alternatively, a new recommendation may be required if it is determined that the number of requests signifies that the file is of long term value and should be held permanently in the local authority archive.

Records Management is concerned with all aspects of records and record-keeping throughout their life cycles, including the creation of records and the retrieval of records during all stages of the life cycle.

Vital Records

Vital Records are records that contain information needed to re-establish or maintain the work of an institution in the event of a disaster. Vital records contain information that cannot be easily reconstructed through other sources, and serious resource or legal implications would result if they were destroyed. As part of a records management system, vital records are identified and steps are taken to ensure that these records are retrievable in the event of a disaster.

As part of the development of a records management system, vital records can be listed with details of the originating section, the reason why the records are considered vital, the medium of the record, the protection either taken or to be taken, and the instructions on how often the vital records must be replaced with more up-to-date records.

There are a number of options to protect vital records including:

- ◆ Natural Dispersal - records generated in multiple copies, which are immediately distributed. The distribution of Minutes of Meetings could be considered a means of protecting the Minutes as vital records: in the event of a disaster, it would be possible to locate another copy of the Minutes.
- ◆ Duplication - vital records are systematically copied and stored at another location. This can be carried out immediately or regularly (every week or month). When duplicating records, care should be taken that the means of duplication does not nullify the value of the record. For example, records such as legal deeds are required in their original form in litigation and if they are to be microfilmed or scanned as vital records, this should be carried out in a manner that would be acceptable in the courts.

Vital Records to be found in Local Authorities include:

- ◆ Minutes of Council Meetings
- ◆ Managers' Orders (originals)
- ◆ Contract Documents
- ◆ Superannuation Register
- ◆ Legal Documents, such as Deeds
- ◆ Registers required by Legislation, such as Planning Register (this may be the files)
- ◆ Financial Accounts

2.3 File Management

File Management is an important function of a Records Management System in a local authority. A record of all decisions taken by a local authority should be recorded for the protection of the local authority and its staff. Staff must develop a new record-keeping awareness to cope with the demands for transparency and accountability on local authorities.

Record Creation: records should be accurate and complete. They must provide good evidence of the activity or function they were created to document. In order to provide good quality evidence, records must be dated, authentic and contain all relevant facts. The date on which records were created or received is vital to the creation of evidential records. The inclusion of a signature or stamp of authenticity, unique to the creating organisation, authenticates records. In addition, the content of a record should be accurate and to the point, indicating clearly the purpose for which the record was created.

Record Capture: it is important that all records created or received by a local authority are captured and stored in an appropriate record-keeping system. A record copy of signed documents sent out by the local authority should be filed by the local authority, in order to ensure that there is evidence of the exact nature of the document sent out.

There are a number of issues to be addressed, in ensuring that records are properly 'captured'.

- ◆ Legal records: Procedures should be developed in each section to ensure that legal records are securely retained and readily accessible. As legal records are vital records, they should be stored in fire-proof safes with copies for the information of staff on the files.
- ◆ Records of Meetings: Minutes should be held for all formal meetings in the local authority. These should include a list of participants, date of the meeting, summary of discussions and decisions taken. These minutes should then be filed. The minutes of meetings of public representatives in a local authority are both archival and vital records. Special care should be taken to ensure their accuracy, authenticity and that they are duly preserved. They should be signed and held in bound volumes of acid-free paper.
- ◆ Registers: Registers should always be kept up-to-date, particularly where they are required by law. The date of registration should always be recorded. These are very important records and should be created with care. If created on paper, good quality acid-free paper should be used. If created electronically, care should be taken to ensure the system is accessible over time.
- ◆ Telephone Conversations / Informal Meetings: Telephone conversations or informal meetings relating to decisions or actions taken by a local authority, should be recorded and filed. Records should include the date, subject, discussion, outcome and signature of participant.
- ◆ Draft Documents: Draft documents illustrate the development of a proposal and its transformation into a formal policy or decision. Drafts containing handwritten notes and comments should be retained. Drafts that contain no difference in content from the final document, may be disposed. Incomplete drafts and drafts that have not been submitted for consideration by other staff members, are not considered records and need not be retained.
- ◆ Supporting Documentation: These include working papers, memoranda and correspondence and should be retained on file, if they provide information necessary to understand the development of a policy or decision. These records can provide reasons for particular courses of action and are of use in the event of any form of litigation.
- ◆ E-mail: E-mails must be considered in the same light as correspondence by post. If an e-mail sent or received by a local authority contains information in relation to an action, transaction, decision or policy of the local authority, then it must be captured as a record. In the absence of an electronic records management system, e-mails should be printed and held on the relevant file.
- ◆ Fax: Faxes may also contain evidence of an action, transaction, decision or policy of the local authority and must be retained as an official record if this is the case. Due to the poor quality of ink and paper used in faxes, the ink on fax sheets will fade and disappear within a very short time of receipt, and it is advised that faxes are photocopied on receipt and stamped with the date of receipt.

- ◆ Electronic Records: Electronic records require the same consideration as records in any other form within a local authority. If they contain evidence of actions, transactions, decisions or policies, they must be created and filed appropriately.
- ◆ Photographs: the date, place and circumstances in which photographs are taken in the local authority should be recorded at the time the photograph is taken. Photographs should not be held on file but stored centrally at the local authority archives service, as photographs and their negatives are light sensitive and may sustain damage if held on the file. A database of photographs should be created and made available to all staff, so that the photographs can be readily accessible and available to staff when they are required.
- ◆ Notes: Care should be taken in creating post-it or other casual notes if these notes relate to a decision or action taken. Important messages should contain a date and signature and the content and context of the note should be made clear.

Filing

Filing is an important feature in the efficient retrieval of records. An integrated filing system should be developed for the local authority. An alpha-numerical filing system allows each section to retain its own decentralised filing system, while still maintaining its relationship with the local authority filing system as a whole.

Each section is given a code, such as RDS for the Roads section. A further code is given for each of the main functions in that section and the files series within these functions are given a number. Files relating to a particular matter, therefore, have a code similar to the following code- RDS/MNT/3; this would indicate a file on road maintenance for a particular area.

- ◆ Opening Files: Files should not be opened in an ad hoc manner. Before opening a new file, the file index should be checked to ensure that the document does not belong in an existing file. A new file must have a reference code that corresponds with those in the index and follows the existing pattern of file codes. Care should be given in providing a file title for a new file, as others will be required to find the file and will not be able to do so if the file title is illogical and without any clear relationship with the documents contained within. It may be necessary to introduce standard terminology for file titles to assist in the retrieval of files. Local authorities operating the Files Series Database created by the Local Government Computer Services Board should ensure that new files are entered onto the database as soon as they are created.⁷
- ◆ Maintaining Files: Files should not be more than 2.5cm thick. Files that are too bulky will be caught in file drawers and become damaged. If a file is more than 2.5cm thick, while current, a second part of the file with the same code should be created and an indication of the number of parts in existence on each of the files. Records should be filed in date order with the latest document at the top of the file.
- ◆ Borrowing Files: Care should be taken to ensure that only those with the authority to do so, access the files. In the absence of an electronic records management system, anyone removing a file from the immediate office space should leave their name and location in place of the file to enable another member of staff seeking the file to locate it. Alternatively, each section could retain a register for Borrowed Files recording the name of the individual to whom the file was issued, the date of issue, file code, file title and date returned. Files should be returned to the cabinet or shelf where they are stored after consultation to prevent loss of the files.
- ◆ Closing Files: Files should be closed in accordance with the recommendation of the Records Schedules. The latest documents on the old file should be moved to the new file as a continuation of the series.

⁷ See Section 2.5

In-House Library

In carrying out the functions of a local authority, staff must often consult published works and copies of legislation. It would be of great benefit to a local authority to provide an in-house library system. This would ensure that staff in the local authority would have access to relevant published works and legislation, without each section or individual staff members having to purchase copies of the required publications.

2.4 Records Centre

A Records Centre is an off-site dedicated storage facility for non-current records. A managed records centre provides a corporate service to the local authority. The service includes retrieval of files or information from files for management, staff and local authority members, and on occasion, for the public.

Records are stored in boxes on high-density shelving. Each shelf is numbered as is each box and a database is maintained to locate the files held in each box and to give the location of the box.

Files due for transfer to the Records Centre are boxed by staff in the section and are accompanied by a Transfer List (sample in Appendix 4). On arrival at the Records Centre, a member of staff there checks the Transfer List against the contents of the box, and inputs the data on the Transfer List into the database (see Files Series Database 2.5) and also records the location of the box on the shelves.

Staff in the section contact the staff at the Records Centre when a file is required. The person requesting the file must have the authority to do so. The file is delivered by the Records Centre staff within an agreed time frame. The file must also be returned to the Records Centre and staff at the Records Centre will again collect the file.

A record is kept of the requests made by staff for files from the Records Centre, and this information is used to determine whether or not it is necessary to alter the retention recommendation given to the series.

A list of files due for disposal is sent to the relevant section by the staff at the Records Centre, in order to ensure that all files due to be destroyed, are no longer required in the section. A Disposal Certificate for files to be destroyed is signed by the Certifying Officer and Archivist.

Resource Implications

To operate a records management system, a dedicated records storage facility is required. This may involve:

- ◆ The construction of a purpose-built records centre;
- ◆ Leasing a suitable building; or
- ◆ Engaging a commercial organisation to provide a centre and operate a records management programme.

In each case, a Records Manager is required to oversee the operation of the system. Adequate human and financial resources are essential for the smooth operation of a records management system.

Transfer of Records to Records Centre

Records Centre staff will provide a Transfer List and boxes to staff, when files are due for transfer to the Records Centre. A Transfer List accompanies each box of files for transfer.⁸

The name of the person in the section responsible for transfer, the date of transfer and the box number are recorded at the top of the transfer list. The date of the files, the file code, the file title and the series title are filled out in the Transfer List. The files are placed in the box with the Transfer List on top.

On arrival at the Records Centre, a member of staff at the Records Centre checks that the files in the transfer list correspond with the files that have arrived in the box.

Files Series Database

In response to the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act, the Local Government Computer Services Board developed a Files Series Database, in order to provide assistance to local authorities in managing their records. The Files Series Database operates as a system to assist in the efficient operation of the Records Centre.

Files Series details are input onto the database with the name, section, function, owner, description, file index, date registered, date last updated and retention recommendation.

Maintenance details are input, recording the departments, sections, locations of record storage and staff in the local authority.

Enquiries can be carried out on the database which allow files to be viewed by Department, Section, function, sub-function, name, description, reference, location, secondary location and life cycle, including files not returned to the Records Centre.

Reports may also be generated by the database, which allows lists of files by series, date, location, life cycle, files out, sections, functions and sub-functions. The policy and function of each department can be recorded. The files in the Records Centre and the Records Centre issues can also be listed.

The Disposal Certificate can also be created on the database.

Note: The Files Series Database is not an electronic records management system but is a system that allows for the electronic operation of the Records Centre.⁹

2.5 Archives Centre

An Archives Centre is a building that houses archives and provides accommodation for professional, administrative, technical and public services. Records, in all formats, are preserved and made available to the public under conditions specified by the Archivist.

Records are stored in accordance with current best practice for the preservation of the format in which the records were created. In general, records are boxed and stored on shelves. The shelves are numbered and a database is maintained of the location of the records in the Archives Store.

Archives require stringent storage conditions in order to ensure their permanent preservation. As a result, the storage area in an Archives Building is environmentally controlled. In order to suit the environmental requirements of a number of media, it is the recommendation of BS5454 Storage and Exhibition of Archival Documents that the following environmental standards be maintained in the storage area:

- ◆ A temperature of 13 C-16 C
- ◆ A relative humidity of 50%-60%

In addition, an Archives Centre must meet a number of other stringent requirements for the preservation of archives. These standards are fully explained in BS5454 Storage and Exhibition of Archival Documents and Standards for the Development of Archives Services in Ireland from the Society of Archivists, Ireland.

Resource Implications

Specific standards are required in the operation of an Archives Service. These may involve:

- ◆ The construction of a purpose built archives centre;
- ◆ The conversion of a suitable building

It is important to have the advice and guidance of a professionally qualified Archivist on the requirements of an Archives Centre at the earliest stages of the project.

Transfer of Records to an Archive Centre

Local Authority records that are designated as archival are transferred to the Archives Centre at the end of the period of non-currency or, in some cases, at the end of the period of currency in accordance with the retention recommendations. The originating section is provided with a list of records for transfer to the Archives Centre. Provided there are no further administrative requirements for the records, Records Centre staff then transfer them to the Archives Centre.

On transfer to the Archives Centre, the records are checked to ensure that they correspond with the transfer list. The Archives Centre staff then record the acquisition of the records. The records are checked for any damage and, if necessary, are placed on a Conservation List to be sent to the Conservator for repair works. The records then await listing by the archivist and when this work has been carried out, the records are made available to the public.

It is important to note that when the records are listed and any conservation work required has been carried out they will be available to the public without the need for any freedom of information request. Records that are designated archival but contain confidential information should be given a period of closure by the archivist, in consultation with the head of the originating section. Archives under a period of closure will not be made available to any party without the permission of the originating section.

Given the stringent storage conditions of the Archives Centre, some records of great significance (for example, the Minute Books or property documents) may be stored at the Archives Centre rather than the Records Centre or the local authority offices. In these cases, these records are still designated current or non-current in accordance with the retention recommendations and access to them remains under the same conditions irrespective of their location.

2.6 Destruction of Records

A list of all files due for destruction is sent to the originating section by Records Centre staff. If the staff of the section have no further need of the files, a Disposal Certificate listing the files for destruction is created. The Certifying Officer and Archivist sign the Disposal Certificate. Each local authority should appoint a Certifying Officer in accordance with the recommendation of the Department of Environment and Local Government in Guidelines for Local Authority Archives (December 1996) which states: 'The Council's Certifying Officer – the County Secretary in this case, must also certify that the records to be disposed of are not required in connection with the administration of the authority and must authorise their disposal in accordance with this Act'.

It is important to ensure that the records for disposal have been destroyed, as failure to ensure destruction of records may lead to the unauthorised release of sensitive or private information. A register of records destroyed should be maintained in addition to the Disposal Certificates, as proof that the records no longer exist in the local authority.¹⁰

Paper-based records may be destroyed by shredding or by pulping. Where a contractor is employed to carry out disposal of records, a certificate of destruction should be issued as proof of destruction and this should be maintained with the Disposal Certificate.

The Committee recommends the shredding and recycling of paper-based records. A large volume of paper-based records can be recycled as part of a records management system.

Electronic / Magnetic Media and other non-paper media:

- ◆ Records stored on magnetic media can be 'bulk erased' by subjecting them to a strong magnetic field.
- ◆ Records held on optical media, particularly sensitive records held on magnetic media, and other non-paper media including videos, film and microfilms can be destroyed by cutting, crushing, or other physical means of destruction.
- ◆ Computer hard disks and other electronic media should be reformatted before being disposed.
- ◆ Files should not be just deleted from magnetic media, including hard disks, as the information, including personal information, can be recovered.

¹⁰ See Case 99046- Mr. ABX and the Department of Social, Community and Family Affairs, Office of the Information Commissioner. Available at www.irlgov.ie/oic

2.7 Disposal of Non-Record Material

Within most files, documents can be found that would not be considered as records. These are referred to in this Report as reference material, and comprise documents such as leaflets, publications and records which are created or generated by other organisations, e.g. publications from the Environmental Protection Agency and copies of minutes of meetings organised by organisations other than local authorities. These documents are not subject to the recommendations of the retention schedule, and may be disposed of when the information in the documents is no longer required, without any certification from the Archivist and Certifying Officer.

3.0 Electronic Records

3.1 Electronic Records

More and more records of the actions and transactions of local authorities are being carried out solely in electronic format. The E-Commerce Act, 1999 and the growing number of records being transferred from manual to automated format, means that local authorities are required to maintain and preserve electronic records as evidence of actions and transactions over time.

A number of questionnaires were sent to local authority Information Systems sections, requesting information on current practices in relation to electronic record-keeping. It is clear that these sections have neither the staff nor the facilities to provide for the long-term storage of electronic records.

Actions to ensure the long-term preservation of electronic records need to be taken when hardware and software are first being considered. In order to maintain electronic records over time, they need to be migrated from one live system to another more up-to-date system. Transfers from live systems to external physical format such as CD, floppy disk, DVD, DAT or other alternatives, need to be carried out systematically. These media have to be stored under stringent storage conditions and would also need to be refreshed periodically.

The EU Forum on Electronic Records recommends:

- ◆ A storage temperature of 18° C +/-5° C
- ◆ A relative humidity of 40% +/-5%
- ◆ Rewriting of electronic records every 10 years
- ◆ Avoidance of magnetic and electronic interference which can cause loss of data

In addition, most local authority staff operate PCs, and are fully in control of the creation, alteration, deletion, access and filing of all records on them. However, few staff members have been given training or advice on how to create good quality evidential records, or on how to file records electronically.

Most local authorities have no filing classification system for electronic records, which means that there is no consistency in the way files are generated and maintained, resulting in difficulties in accessing records on PCs. Without a filing classification system it is impossible to devise a retention schedule for these records, and they are either left lying on PCs taking up memory space or they are deleted, without due consideration to a possible need for the record in the future.

There are currently few official guidelines for staff in relation to the use of e-mail. No action has been taken to ensure that important records sent by e-mail are maintained and filed properly.

It is apparent that a great deal more investigation is required in order to determine the best course of action to be taken in relation to electronic records and their long-term preservation. It is advised that a team of IS officers, archivists, administrators and other interested parties be established to develop a strategy for the preservation of all electronic records (including e-mails) in local authorities¹¹.

¹¹ Further information on current projects on the creation and preservation of evidential electronic records can be found through the links on the National Archives website www.nationalarchives.ie.

In the absence of any nationally agreed strategy for the preservation of electronic records, the Committee has recommended that any electronic systems (in particular registers) that are required for long-term preservation should be migrated onto a new format every three years. This measure is to ensure the accessibility of the data over time. In the event of the introduction of a nationally agreed strategy on electronic records, this recommendation should be revised in accordance with the recommendations of such a strategy.

3.2 Microfilming and Scanning of Records

Microfilming and scanning can be a means of reducing the bulk of large numbers of paper records. However, while it may seem that microfilming and scanning are space saving and cost cutting solutions, they can waste money and resources. It is important to fully investigate the advantages and disadvantages of taking this step, and to consider carefully whether the transfer of paper records to microfilm or optical disk would be more or less expensive than current storage costs for the paper records.

Authorities should be aware that the process of transferring the records can be expensive and the resulting microfilm or optical disk does require more stringent storage conditions than paper records. In addition, microfilmed or scanned records will be of no value unless they are properly and very clearly reproduced, and can be identified through an index or reference system, such as a file index or map reference numbers. If the image reproduced is illegible, then the microfilm or scanned image will neither replace nor reduce the use of the originals.

Original records may be required for legal reasons and in microfilming or scanning such records (e.g. Planning Applications), there may be difficulties in providing evidence to authenticate the reproduced document. In the case of scanned images, the ease of alteration and the high risk of the obsolescence of hardware and software increase the risks of this method (see Electronic Records 3.1).

It is recommended that before embarking on a project to microfilm or scan records in local authorities, current specifications and standards are consulted. In particular, it is recommended that BS 6498:1991 Guide to Preparation of Microfilm and Other Microforms that may be Requested as Evidence, is consulted in addition to the technical standards produced by the British Standards Institute and the International Standards Institute.¹²

TURF PRODUCTION.

Provision of Turf for non-turf areas - Winter 1941-42.

Replies to queries raised by the Department of the Taoiseach in minute of 10/10/41.

A. Turf produced under the County Surveyors' Schemes:-

1. (a) What is the total quantity produced?

1,000,000 tons approximately.

(b) What is the amount of the surplus available for the non-turf areas?

To the surplus of 567,000 tons produced by Co. Surveyors should be added a probable Turf Development Board surplus of 80,000 tons of machine turf and briquettes, of which 50,000 tons is intended for Dublin.

Particulars are as follows:-

In Turf Areas.		In Non-Turf Areas.
	Tons.		Tons.
Kerry ...	100,000	Meath ...	11,000
Leix ...	7,000	Wicklow ...	3,000
Clare ...	30,000	Dublin ...	1,000
Westmeath ..	15,000	Limerick ..	18,000
Offaly ...	5,000	Cork North.	28,000
Mayo ...	100,000	Cork South.	5,000
Roscommon ..	20,000
Longford ...	20,000	Total ...	70,000
Galway ...	50,000	Total in
Donegal ...	150,000	Turf areas	497,000
		Total ...	567,000*

* This includes any turf removed from the above areas to the non turf areas.

2. (a) What quantity of this turf has already been transported to the non-turf areas?

Up to 20/10/41 the following amounts of turf had been received by Fuel Importers, Ltd., or the Board of Works:-

	Tons.
Dublin ...	64,062
Cork ...	8,922
Dundalk ...	7,712
Drogheda ...	378
Waterford ...	2,089
Wexford ...	3,295
Limerick ...	5,094
	91,552*

* This figure includes 21,618 tons acquired by Fuel Importers, Ltd., and the Board of Works from sources other than the County Councils.

(b) What is the present daily rate of delivery?

For the week ended 25/10/41 the average daily rate of delivery was about 1,424 tons.

(c) Is it likely that the present daily rate of delivery can be improved and, if so, in what time and to what extent?

D/Env, general, box 140, County and City management:

An administrator at the Donegal mental hospital in Letterkenny writes to the Department, decrying the practice of institutionalising the mentally ill children in the hospital. April 1923.

TIRCONNAIL MENTAL HOSPITAL,
LETTERKENNY .

10th April, 1923.

Dear Mr. McCarron,

I have forwarded to-day to the Minister of Local Government the statistical information called for in Circular 11556/1923 miscellaneous, dated 21st March re this Mental Hospital. In this respect you will note that out of a total of 525 patients I have classified 62 as "mentally defective" and 39 "epileptics" (Total 101). The Balance 524 being "mentally deranged". Of the latter classification a number are, in my opinion, harmless, a great many being cases of Dementia due to senile decay. These classes I have always thought do not really require care in a properly equipped Mental Hospital, necessitating the very large expenditure of such an institution - as for instance, here you will notice the average weekly cost per Head calculated on the gross - less in respect of borrowed money, farm and garden superannuation is 30/4d. To me this would appear very extravagant. But under existing circumstances, with Salaries and Wages at £15,000. 9. 2, our staff being extremely large, and the general high cost of maintenance, what can one do? Surely a better system could be adopted than the present - whereby these classes of the poor afflicted could be very comfortably housed or looked after at a far less cost to the ratepayers. They are cases in which there is absolutely no chance of ultimate recovery. Also they are in no way able to help the finances of the institution by doing useful work such as on the farm or in the workshop (that is the case of the Idiot, Imbecile and Senile). I had a most interesting talk long ago with the Bishop of Ross (Most Rev. Dr. Kealy) on the Youghal Auxiliary Asylum in which he took a great deal of trouble, and certainly I was greatly impressed with the way it was run - both as regards the comfort of the patients and the financial aspect.

Another matter which I think needs reform long overdue, viz., the establishing some form of house for the Mentally Deficient child who cannot be kept at home. In my opinion it is nothing short of criminal sending a child of tender years into a place like this. They have sometimes been sent in here under eight years of age. One can do nothing with them. The surroundings and example they see every day are hopeless. They have every opportunity of learning vice in its filthiest forms and grow up absolutely useless members of society. This is a really terrible blot on our country. We have had cases of this sort here that I am perfectly certain had they been able to be sent to a House where they would have got some training from the beginning, to an extent, self-supporting even if they would have had to stay in an Institution for the remainder of their days. Also they would have had a chance of growing up with cleaner minds when separated from the associations of depraved adult insane. It is only the person in daily contact with the latter can know what this means.

I am afraid this is a tiresome letter to you, but as you kindly said, when I saw you in Dublin recently that you would like to have any suggestions on the care of the mentally afflicted, I merely take the liberty of putting my views before you for what they are worth. That there is great room for improvement I think, no one with any experience in the

Statement of Duties to be performed by the Beach Guard, in Bundoran Urban District.

1. The Beach Guard appointed is to attend on Bundoran Beach continuously from 8 oc. am. to 8 oc. pm. on every day during his employment - Sundays included - except while attending to his Religious duties and also during dinner hour from 12-30 pm. to 1-30 pm.
2. He is to take strict care of Council's property placed on the Strand and on the walks around the Beach and report at once to the Council any damage done or abuses that he may observe. He is to have all life-saving appliances ready in case of emergency during the time he is on duty, and have them carefully locked up after 8 oc. pm. each day.
3. The Beach Guard must be courteous to all persons frequenting the Strand and give advice as to when and where the may bathe, when he is applied to.
4. He must use every means at his disposal for the prevention of bathing accidents, at all places within his view and frequented by bathers.
5. If a bather appears to be in an unsuitable place in the water or to be bathing when the sea is in a dangerous condition, the Beach Guard must immediately warn the person, and if the warning is unheeded, he must take steps for the removal of such person. When the sea is in a dangerous state he must prevent all bathing and order that the dressing boxes be closed. He is to give warning by waving a flag that bathing is prohibited when the sea is not suitable.
6. In case a person attempts to bathe without being attired in a suitable bathing costume, the matter must be reported at once to the Civil Guards.

1 treat from "Leinster Express" of 12th November, 1949.

Mr. Flanagan wants a Laois Man to be Council's Solicitor.

The Taoiseach is to be asked to recommend a Laois man to the Appointments Commissioners for the post of Solicitor to the County Council. At present, there are four solicitors acting in various capacities for the Council, and Mr. O. J. Flanagan, T.D., is of opinion that the permanent position of County Solicitor. He proposed the resolution (carried) to this effect at Monday's meeting of the Council.

Chairman's Opinion

When Mr. Flanagan moved his motion, the Chairman, Mr. E.J. Breen, asked him was he on good ground in doing so, and added that it was an infringement on an Act of Parliament. While he saw nothing wrong with appointing a local solicitor to the post, he believed the Council should not accept this resolution.

Mr. T. Territt said he would also like to see a Laois man appointed, but thought Mr. Flanagan could raise this matter in the Dáil.

Mr. Flanagan recalled that some time ago they passed a resolution about the appointment of a doctor, and as a result, the Appointments Commissioners changed their tune. As sure as they did not ask for a Laois man in this case, some one from "Rishurst" would be County Solicitor here. He believed the five T.D.'s from this area would get a hearing from the Taoiseach, in seeing that, all other things being equal, preference would be given to a Laois man in this case. The Taoiseach could suggest that to the Appointments Commissioners.

"I warn the Council" said Mr. Flanagan, "that if a Laois man is not appointed, they will hear more about it."

He asked who had a better right to some of the plums of this county, and added that while not interested in any solicitors, as he wanted to keep out from them, he held that this position should be given to a Laois man. If the Local Appointments Commissioners got a recommendation from the Taoiseach, as he was suggesting, it would let them see that the County Council was behind the request.

Limerick Co

L.M.

8TH. September, 1920.

A Chara,

It has been reported to me by Official Labour that at a recent Meeting of the Limerick Co. Council Mr. Cahill tabled a motion that "None but Trade Union Labour be employed under the Council" and that he subsequently withdrew the motion owing to the objections raised by the Chairman (Mr. J. Wall) and Mr. De Lacy, the latter saying if his principle were adopted, it would be a coercive measure and contrary to the principles of Bill Eircan.

I am sure that gentleman expressed this opinion in ignorance of the fact that this principle has been adopted wherever the will of the people was strong enough to make itself felt. Labour has found it necessary to adopt it for its own protection, and far from being a coercive measure it is a measure for the protection of the worker against the constant encroachment on their liberties by the employing classes. It has been accepted and approved by all lovers of fair play in all countries, and it surprised me that such a well known and approved principle was not even allowed a fair discussion in a democratic Council composed of lovers of liberty. Of course I realize that there must be some mistake and I hasten to assure you that this principle has already been recognized by those Republican Bodies before whom it has been brought that it is the usual rule in all Branches of Labour and is accepted by Employers of all classes of labour.

D/Env, general, box 140, County and City Management:

Philip Monahan, the first city manager to be appointed, writes from Cork to the Department expressing annoyance with the behaviour of elected councillors. January 1930.

ΠΙΛΙΠ Ο ΜΟΝΑΧΑΝ,
Διοικητορας ης Καθαρας.

PHILIP MONAHAN,
CITY MANAGER.

ΟΙΦΙΣ ΑΝ ΘΑΜΙΝΙΤΕΟΡΑ,
City Manager's Office,

ΠΑΙΡΕ ΑΝ ΣΕΑΝΑΤΟΙΣ,
Fitzgerald Park,

CORCAGS, 22nd U. DE January, 1930.
Cork.

Dear Mr. W. L. Brown,

I enclose your sheet from Bureau for Research in Local Government, Harvard University.
The questions are well thought out and you may find them suggestive. I enclose, too, copy of my laconic reply.

There is talk of our councillors holding a private meeting to discuss their position. Two or three of the old brigade are not settling down, nor so I think them likely to do so. The business party is pretty useless. Its members are not attending well and two of them are quite stupid. Foley, I think wants to go a bit of the way with everyone. Leonard of course wants to go back to old regime. If the meeting comes off, I cannot see it coming to any conclusion. We had a meeting last night when every one was in bad humor.
This time of the year was a bit trying for everybody and our councillors are a little put out that their names should be so prominent in public eye as recent events have made them. I fear you were a bit unfortunate in your first manager but at any rate he has erred on a pretty safe side.

Sincerely Yours
Monahan

D/Taoiseach S12787:

The Catholic Hierarchy, through its secretary, Dr Staunton, Bishop of Ferns, express opposition to holding local elections on a Sunday in a letter to 'His Excellency', Eamon de Valera. June 1942.

SUMMITT
NEWFORD
30th June, 1942.

His Excellency Eamon de Valera, T.D.

An Taoiseach agus Aire Gnóthaí Eachtracha.

Your Excellency,

At their General Meeting, held on the 23rd inst., the Bishops considered the question raised in your Excellency's letter with regard to the holding of a General Election or Local Government Elections on a Sunday or Church Holiday. They considered this question with a realisation of the important reasons which motivated it and in the desire to be helpful to the Government. They were however of opinion that polling on a Sunday or Church Holiday was not desirable.

With my prayers and good wishes for the members of the Government and for your Excellency personally,

I remain

Very sincerely yours

+ James Staunton, Bp of Ferns.

Secretary.

NOTE:

The Valuation Act, 2001 was enacted by the President in June 2001. The new Act provides for the repeal of all current valuation legislation and its replacement by a modern Valuation Code. The operation of a new Valuation Code will differ substantially from the existing Code. The Minister for Finance has decided that the Valuation Act will come into operation on the 2nd May 2002. The new Valuation List will be then introduced across the state on a rolling basis. When the new Valuation List is introduced into a local authority area, the existing Valuation List will become obsolete and all records designated as archival should be transferred to the Archives.

D/Env, general, housing 1948-60, box 49:
 It was clear by the early 1950s that few local authorities were interested in employing direct labour for housing schemes, August 1952.

DIRECT LABOUR HOUSING SCHEMES.

Returns of local authorities for half-year ended
 31st March, 1952.

Leathary. So see. I do not think there is any reason to take any specific action. Our Circ of 18th July last is adequate to control the

Summary of returns made by housing authorities, and statement showing the results graded according to the level of cost of houses completed by direct labour in the half-year are attached. The completion of these documents was delayed by the inability of the Kilkenny Corporation to supply the required information during the absence on sick leave until recently of the Borough Surveyor. The summary of replies does not include housing authorities who had previously engaged in direct labour work but gave up before the half-year under consideration. These have, however, been included under the review of results in a special class, so that complete particulars of operations will be maintained. Buncrana U.D. has not been included in the summary of replies since the scheme of repairs there was not considered appropriate for inclusion on the last occasion. No new names appear i.e. no local authority commenced direct labour work in the half-year, but a number brought their work to a conclusion.

The following figures show how local authorities participated in direct labour housing activities in the half-year. The figures for the previous half-year are shown in brackets - Cork County Council is shown as heretofore as three separate authorities:-

	Building only	Building & Development	Development only.
County Councils	6 (7)	10 (11)	2 (2)
County Boroughs	1 (1)	3 (3)	- (-)
Urban District Councils, including Boroughs	5 (6)	7 (7)	6 (7)
Town Commissioners	- (1)	1 (2)	- (-)
Totals	12 (15)	23 (23)	8 (9)

Progress is shown by the following figures:-

Total number of dwellings completed up to 31st March, 1950	.. 852
No. completed in 1/2-year ended 30th September, 1950	.. 827
" " " " " 31st March, 1951	.. 726
" " " " " 30th September, 1951	.. 806
" " " " " 31st March, 1952	.. 884
Total number of houses in progress on 1st April, 1952	-2,112

The number of houses completed by direct labour in the half-year is a little in excess of that for the preceding one, and exceeds that for any preceding half-year.

NOTE:
The Valuation Act, 2001 was enacted by the President in June 2001. The new Act provides for the repeal of all current valuation legislation and its replacement by a modern Valuation Code. The operation of a new Valuation Code will differ substantially from the existing Code. The Minister for Finance has decided that the Valuation Act will come into operation on the 2nd May 2002. The new Valuation List will be then introduced across the state on a rolling basis. When the new Valuation List is introduced into a local authority area, the existing Valuation List will become obsolete and all records designated as archival should be transferred to the Archives.

26 Sanhain, 1946.

A Chars,

I am directed by the Minister for Local Government and Public Health to state that an engineering inspector of the Department recently inspected roads in the county and has noted the following matters as requiring attention:

L. 10. Cavan - Butler's Bridge: There is a bad bump on the bridge over the railway line.

L. 24. Butler's Bridge-Balturbet: Further extensive patching is necessary to eliminate waviness where the road traverses boggy terrain.

L. 50. Balturbet-Ballyconnell: The first $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Balturbet is very corrugated and the sides of the road need to be made up.

L. 17. Ballyconnell to Leitrim border or Ballinamore road: It is some years since the first mile from Ballyconnell was rolled and surface-dressed and the sealing coat is almost completely worn off. Portion of the remainder of the road is to be dealt with under an Employment Scheme.

L. 3. Leitrim Border-Killeshandra: The first $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles from the border have not been surfaced and the road is very bumpy.

L. 24. Virginia-Ballisborough: The first 3 miles from Virginia require patching and sealing; the surface is bumpy. The next mile has not been rolled and has a very poor surface. The remainder of the road requires patching and sealing in many places.

L. 24. Ballisborough-Shercock: The first 2 miles are very bumpy and will require reconstruction, as will also the last mile into Shercock. Some patching is required on the section in between.

Mise, le seas,

a.s. Ními.

County Surveyor,
County Council Offices,
Cavan.

The Case for Good Records Management

The Age, a newspaper in New South Wales, Australia reported that according to a report of the Auditor General in New South Wales, deficient records and poor staff management were responsible for a $19m [€10.5m] payment by NSW government agencies to resolve legal disputes in 1999.

In January 2001, the Miami Herald reported that the town of Golden Beach, Miami, USA paid out $18,000 dollars [€21,000] to a resident because the town could not find and therefore, provide, the large volume of records requested under Freedom of Information legislation.

In May 2001, Federal Computer Week in the United States reported that FBI Director, Louis Freeh, blamed the loss of documents in the case of convicted Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh, on a lack of leadership attention on records management. He stated that the FBI would create a new organisation focused entirely on the issue of records collection. He stated 'The dizzying pace of the evolution of crime, terrorism and technology, I believe, has caused us to lessen our focus [on records management], a function so basic that perhaps we have taken it for granted. Not any more.'

In May 2001, The Guardian reported that Transco, the privatised monopoly operating Britain's gas pipe network, had admitted that it had lost its regional records of the numbers of gas leaks awaiting repair. Without the records, it was not possible to determine what leaks were awaiting repair or to identify the exact location of pipes requiring repair.

In May 2001, Newsday.com reported on the audit of the Nassau Comptroller in the United States. The report stated that taxpayers may be losing millions of dollars a year because of the failure of Nassau county to manage its property. This failure was said to be due to a number of problems, one of which was inefficient record-keeping.

In September 2001, The Irish Times reported that a substantial number of negligence claims against hospitals have had to be paid because medical records had been mislaid. St. Paul Ireland Insurance, the company that provides medical indemnity for doctors, accused hospitals of poor standards in record-keeping over the past 30 years.

Non-Current Records Centre Survey

Results and Analysis

Methodology

The survey was chiefly intended to ascertain the present state of development of records management services throughout local authorities.

- ◆ The extent to which provision had been made in local authorities for non-current record storage.
- ◆ The extent to which the File Series Database, developed by the Local Government Computer Services Board was in use in local authorities.

Questionnaires were sent out to the Freedom of Information Officers of each local authority. Questions related also to any Town Council for which the Freedom of Information Officer may have responsibility.

Local Authorities Returning the Questionnaire:

Cork City Council	Cork County Council
Clare County Council	Donegal County Council
Dublin City Council	Fingal County Council
Galway City Council	Kerry County Council
Kildare County Council	Laois County Council
Limerick County Council	Limerick City Council
Longford County Council	Meath County Council
Monaghan County Council	Offaly County Council
Roscommon County Council	Sligo County Council
South Dublin County Council	North Tipperary County Council
South Tipperary County Council	Waterford County Council
Westmeath County Council	Wicklow County Council
Wexford County Council

Survey Results

I. Provision of Managed Non-Current Record Storage

Seven counties indicated that provision had been made for non-current record storage. These are: Clare County Council, Galway City Council, Louth County Council, Laois County Council, Waterford County Council, South Dublin County Council and North Tipperary County Council.

In addition, some authorities indicated a commitment to do so within the next three years. These are: Dublin City Council, Donegal County Council, Fingal County Council, Kildare County Council, Kerry County Council, Limerick County Council, Limerick City Council and Roscommon County Council. It was indicated that the storage would be part of new civic premises in the case of Donegal County Council. Wexford County Council has included plans for the development of an archives and records management service in their Corporate Plan.

Management Issues

2.A Use of File Series Database.

The Local Government Computer Services Board has developed this database as a file management tool to assist with Freedom of Information queries.

Clare County Council is using the database as part of its records management service. Limerick County Council, Limerick City Corporation and Waterford County Council are presently populating the database. Dublin City Council, Kerry County Council and Monaghan County Council noted that they intended that it would be used within an unspecified time period. Use was under discussion in Laois County Council, Longford County Council, Louth County Council, Meath County Council, Offaly County Council and Wicklow County Council.

2.B Commercial Record Storage Services

Cork County Council, Cork City Council, Dublin City Council, Limerick County Council and Limerick City Council indicated that they used commercial records storage services. The estimated cost for the combined authorities in Cork was noted at c.€127,000 per annum. No information on costs was provided from the other respondents.

Concluding Comments

- ◆ There is some movement towards development of records management services in 47% of the local authorities surveyed.
- ◆ Definite commitments are in place in Clare County Council, Donegal County Council, South Dublin County Council, Dublin City Council, Limerick County Council, Limerick City Council, Waterford County Council, Waterford City Council and Wexford County Council.

DEFINITIONS OF TERMS

Archives

Records retained permanently in order to preserve the evidence of the functions, actions and transactions of local authorities and to maintain accessibility of those records held electronically, through changes in hardware and software for future generations, and to meet the needs of researchers.

Archive Centre

Building equipped to specific standards to ensure the preservation of records of long-term value and to enable these records to be accessible to the public.

Archivist

Professionally qualified person trained to devise systems to ensure the permanent preservation of the archives of the institution and to effectively manage, organise and dispose of the records generated in the course of an institution's business.

CCMA

County and City Managers' Association.

Certifying Officer

Officer responsible for granting permission for the disposal of files, (this is often the Director of Corporate Affairs or the head of the section to which the files for disposal belong).

Closure

Specified period of time during which records are held in the Archives Centre but are unavailable for public inspection due to the personal and confidential nature of the information contained within the records.

Conversion

Act of converting electronic records from one format to another or one medium to another, in order to assist in their long-term preservation.

Current

Records that are required frequently, in order to carry out day-to-day actions and transactions of a local authority.

DoELG

Department of the Environment and Local Government.

Destruction

Act of disposing of records in all formats in such a manner as to ensure that they cannot be reconstructed.

Disposal

The destruction, usually by shredding, of records that no longer have any administrative or archival value.

Disposal Form

Form of authorisation which lists the files intended to be disposed of by a local authority, giving the date and title of the files.

Electronic Records

Records where the information is communicated and maintained by means of electronic equipment. Information could be maintained/stored in a number of ways – on the database (the main database or a special archives database); on magnetic media; on optical disks; or on separate hardcopy. Electronic records must be readily accessible for the length of the specified retention period. Conversion, migration and refreshing are the required methods of maintaining accessibility to electronic records, whatever their storage medium. Routine treatment (such as wiping, updating, alterations or rerecording), does constitute disposal. NSW Government Record-keeping Manual.

File

An organised unit of documents grouped together.

File Closure

Files should be no greater than 2.5cm in depth, or alternatively, should be closed 5 years after opening. If an issue remains 'live' after the appropriate closure of a file, a continuation file or subsequent part should be opened. The actions recommended within should be taken from the date of the first document/opening of the file.

FMS

Financial Management System, an electronic accrual accounts system in operation in many local authorities.

LGCSB

Local Government Computer Services Board.

LGMSB

Local Government Management Services Board.

Metadata

Information which facilitates the management, accessibility and meaning of records through time by identifying, authenticating and contextualising records and the people, processes and systems that create and keep them. NSW Record-keeping Metadata Standard

In the context of this report, the term metadata is used to denote manuals, reports, correspondence and memoranda relating to electronic systems used in local authorities which can be used to identify, authenticate and contextualise the electronic records through time.

Migration

Act of moving electronic records to newer systems, while preserving the authenticity, integrity and evidential value of the record.

Non-Current

Records which are not frequently referred to in order to conduct current business but which need to be retained in case of a revival of the issue/matter, or in order to comply with legislation or regulations.

Public Record

Records created and received by public offices in the course of official business: 'any record made and kept, or received and kept, by any person in the course of the exercise of official functions in a public office, or for any purpose of a public office, or for the use of a public office, whether before or after the commencement of this section'.

NSW State Records Act, 1998.

Record

Recorded information, in any form, including data in computer systems, created or received and maintained by an organisation or person in the transaction of business or the conduct of affairs and kept as evidence of such an activity.

Australian Standard on Records Management Part 1.

Records Centre

Off-site storage facility for non-current records.

Records Management

Records management is the discipline and organisational function of managing records to meet operational needs, accountability requirements and community expectations.

Australian Standard on Records Management Part 1.

Records Manager

Professionally qualified person trained to devise systems for the effective management, organisation and disposal of the records generated in the course of an organisation's business.

Records Schedule

A list of records, detailing the length of time they should be kept by local authorities and stating whether the records should be retained permanently or destroyed at the conclusion of their usefulness to the administration of functions within a local authority.

Reference

In the context of this report, the term "reference" is used to indicate documents retained due to their informational value for staff, such as, reports from other organisations, contact lists and circulars. This material is not considered a record and may be disposed of without the approval of the archivist or certifying officer, when the document is no longer required for information purposes by staff.

Refreshing

Act of moving a stream of bits in an electronic from one location to another, without necessarily moving them from one physical medium to another.

Retention Periods

Retention periods specify how long records should be kept by the organisation either in the office or in off-site storage before disposing of them. NSW Government Record-keeping Manual.

Routine Correspondence

Correspondence of a minor nature held separately from other records.

NSW Government Record-keeping Manual.

Sampling

A process of appraisal, whereby certain records from a large series of files, usually case files, are selected by the Archivist for preservation as archives. There are different methods of sampling, including statistical and non-statistical.

Series

A group of records created in a like format, maintained in a sequence and usually relating to a particular function or activity. The disposal classes listed in this schedule may consist of one series, several series or part of a series. NSW Government Record-keeping Manual.

A group of records/files relating to a particular function or activity of a local authority, for example, an organic sequence of records/files relating to a particular water supply scheme or frequently occurring correspondence with another organisation on a particular matter.

Vital Records

Records that contain information needed to re-establish or maintain the work of an institution in the event of a disaster.

Weed

Removal of documents that are misfiled, ephemeral or of no long-term value, such as brochures, the removal of multiple copies of documents and routine documents.
